Dear Ms. Dantis,

Thank you for participating in the 2013 Bombardier Plane Pull for ALS! Congratulations to you and your team, Team Language Marketplace, for pulling a Bombardier Q400 NextGen aircraft, weighing approximately 37,000 lbs. Your team pulled the plane 100 metres in 1.49 minutes an amazing show of support for the ALS community.

Your donation is so important in helping ALS Canada in our mission to support research towards finding a cure for ALS, while supporting the provincial ALS societies in their provision of quality care for persons living with ALS. This year we targeted a fundraising goal of $100,000, and thanks to you and your team we are almost there.

Although the excitement of the day has passed, please continue to keep the fundraising momentum by asking your circle of friends, colleagues and family to contribute to the cause. You can continue to receive donations online via your personal website or by www.alsplanepull.ca and select the show support tab.

It was a fun-filled day and words cannot express our sincere appreciation to you and your team for supporting the event, pulling together to help people living with ALS. Please take a minute to visit www.alsplanepull.ca to see your team photos and other great moments from the event. We are anticipating to have the 2013 video up on the plane pull site by the end of June!

In closing, I want to convey how appreciative we are for your support of ALS Canada. Your personal commitment has allowed Canada to remain one of the leading countries in the world for ALS research. Your assistance means so much to me, but even more to the ALS community – for those living with ALS and for their loved ones whose lives are forever changed. Your continued support and generosity provide hope that one day a cure for ALS will be found. We look forward to seeing you again next year.

Sincerely,

Enzo Raponi
